The Knitting Pilgrim is a multidisciplinary one-man show combining storytelling, image projection, and three huge knitted 'stained glass windows (all hand knitted).' The play -- all about knitting, and not about knitting at all -- recounts Kirk Dunn's twenty-year artistic and spiritual journey hand-knitting the ambitious project, and looks at why people struggle to get along, the meaning of art, and the power of love to overcome major obstacles (and minor mishaps).

Kirk conducted interviews with leaders from three faiths, the first of which was with his father, Dr. Zander Dunn, a retired Presbyterian minister, followed by interviews with an imam and a rabbi. He uncovers some of the roots of these three faiths, and we can see that they are actually much more similar than they are different.
